HORSES AND FARM ANIMALS

The keeping of farm animals and horses by residents is permitted as an accessory use in the RR-1A and RR-1B rural residential zones. In the other residential zoning districts a conditional use permit is required.

MINIMUM ACREAGE REQUIREMENTS FOR FARM ANIMALS (OTHER THAN HORSES)

An animal unit is defined as: one cow or steer; one horse, donkey or burro; three sheep; or 25 fowl. One animal unit requires one acre of land for the home and one acre of land in addition to the house. Each additional animal unit requires an additional acre of dry, buildable land. Wetlands and wetland buffers cannot be used.

MINIMUM ACREAGE REQUIREMENTS FOR HORSES - PASTURE REQUIREMENTS

The keeping of one horse requires one acre of land for the home and two acres of dry, upland pasture. Each additional horse requires an additional acre of pasture. Wetlands and wetland buffers cannot be considered pasture.

FENCING

Grazing animals must be fenced out of septic system drainfields, wetlands, wetland buffers, lakeshore setbacks, and tributary setbacks.

A board rail fence within a front, street or side street yard for the specific purpose of enclosing horses may have a top rail height of 60 inches if it is no more than 50 percent opaque. Further information on fences can be found in City Code Section 78-1405\(9\) the fence information sheets.

BUILDINGS

Structures and buildings housing farm animals must be 75 feet from any property line and 150 feet from dwellings on adjacent properties. See the residential accessory building information sheet for more information on buildings.
